Thus, the ratio of C, H atoms is 1 : 2
 The empirical formula of the compound is C₂H₄
 (iii) Mol. wt. = n (Empirical formula weight) = 2 × Vapor Density
 $n \times 28 = 112$
 $n = 112 / 28 = 4$
 or $12 \times 4 = 48$
 or $16 \times 4 = 64$
 or $22 \times 4 = 88$
 or $n = 4$
 The molecular formula of the compound is C₈H₁₆
 (iv) C₈H₁₆ can be prepared from ethane by successive reactions.

A	Chloride ion (Cl ⁻)
B	Sulphate ion (SO ₄ ²⁻)
C	Nitrate ion (NO ₃ ⁻)
D	Sulphate ion (SO ₄ ²⁻)
E	Carbonate ion (CO ₃ ²⁻)

CHEMISTRY ICSE-2008

SECTION-I (40 Marks) (Attempt all questions from this Section.)
 Q.1. (a) For parts (i) to (e), select the correct answer from the choices A, B, C, D which are given. Write down only the letter corresponding to the correct answer.
 (i) With reference to the variation of properties in the Periodic Table, which of the following is generally true?
 A. Atomic size increases from left to right across a period.
 B. Ionisation potential increases from left to right across a period.
 C. Electron affinity increases going down a group.
 D. Electronegativity increases going down a group.
 (ii) Which of the following is not an uncommon characteristic of an electrovalent compound?
 A. High melting point. B. Conducts electricity when molten.
 C. Consists of oppositely charged ions. D. Ions when dissolved in water.
 (iii) Dilute sulphuric acid will produce a white precipitate when added to a solution of:
 A. Copper nitrate. B. Zinc nitrate.
 C. Lead nitrate. D. Sodium nitrate.
 (iv) The salt which in solution gives a pale green precipitate with sodium hydroxide solution is a white precipitate with barium chloride solution is:
 A. Lead(II) sulphate. B. Iron(II) sulphate.
 C. Iron(II) chloride. D. Iron(III) chloride.
 (v) The gas law which relates the volume of a gas to the number of molecules of the gas is:
 A. Avogadro's Law. B. Gay-Lussac's Law.
 C. Boyle's Law. D. Charles' Law.
 (vi) During the electrolysis of molten lead bromide, which of the following takes place?
 A. Bromine is released at the cathode. B. Lead is deposited at the anode.
 C. Bromine ions gain electrons. D. Lead is deposited at the cathode.

Q.2. (a) (i) Name the organic compound prepared by each of the following:
 (i) $C_2H_5COONa + NaOH \rightarrow$
 (ii) $CH_3I + 2H \rightarrow$
 (iii) $C_2H_5Br + KOH$ (alcoholic solution) \rightarrow
 (iv) $CO + 2H_2$ (Zinc oxide catalyst) \rightarrow
 (v) $CaC_2 + 2H_2O \rightarrow$
 (ii) Identify the following substances:
 (i) An alkaline gas A which gives dense white fumes with hydrogen chloride.
 (ii) A dilute acid B which does not normally give hydrogen when reacted with metals but does give gas when it reacts with copper.
 (iii) Gas C has an offensive smell like rotten eggs.
 (iv) Gas D is a colourless gas which can be used as a bleaching agent.
 (v) Liquid E can be dehydrated to produce ethene.
 (b) Write the equation for the following reactions: [5]
 (i) Aluminium nitride and water. (ii) Calcium carbide and water.
 Ethene and water (steam). (iv) Sulphur dioxide and water.
 (iii) Bromoethane and an aqueous solution of sodium hydroxide.
 (c) Here is an electrode reaction: $Cu \rightarrow Cu^{2+} + 2e^-$
 At which electrode (anode or cathode) would such a reaction take place? Is this an example of oxidation or reduction? [5]
 (d) A solution contains magnesium ions (Mg²⁺), iron (II) ions (Fe²⁺) and copper ions (Cu²⁺). On passing an electric current through this solution which ions will be the first to be discharged at the cathode? Write the equation for the cathode reaction.
 (e) Why is carbon tetrachloride, which is a liquid, a non-electrolyte? [5]
 (f) What are the terms defined in (d)(i) - (v) below?
 (i) A bond formed by a shared pair of electrons, each bonding atom contributing one electron to the pair.
 (ii) A bond formed by a shared pair of electrons with both electrons coming from the same atom.

Hi Carolyn,

I (meaning my son) used to have a beautiful german shepherd. believe it or not, he was stolen a few years ago. fact is that full blooded dogs, especially german shepherd, doberman etc are very sought after for breeding. one can fetch up to 150€ just from coupling. in a context of poverty, they become very valuable.
so someone figured out that a bourgeois curator and her son are holding that dog just for fun. so they took it. a very sad story for us. we are still mourning "Flux" even after 4years.
My son took all images of him with him to plaster his student's room in France...so you can imagine.

K

Dear Carolyn,

Unfortunately, I don't really like dogs (to be in my home). My wife, on the other hand, loves dogs (it seems my children too). She substitutes the dog affection with plants and flowers which intense presence in the house I don't mind (still).

Would you like a digital photo of her favorite flower (substituting an adorable dog)?

Dear Carolyn,

I hope you are well and that the great work with Documenta is going on "vento a poppa". I returned to Brazil and now I feel better and have returned to work. The inauguration of the retrospective exhibition at the CGAC in Santiago de Compostela was a success and despite my extreme fatigue and an inopportune sinusitis I'm quite pleased with the outcome.

No, I don't have a dog, the more I have four grandchildren and the youngest of one year Samuel, who is my sweetheart. So let me ask you, Samuel, my grandchildren works?

Once and again I express my excitement of being part of this Documenta.

Dear Carolyn,

The dog of my life was a bonus to bonding with my partner Jean. At the time we connected Jean owned a magnificent Aketa, named Sipapu. Serene, fearless and sometimes wise. Loved the Shwangunk mountains upriver from NYC. Many many hikes. We buried her in the Swangunks near the hut I had at the time. That was something like fifteen years ago. Could probably find a decent photo if you do want to include dogs from the past. Let me know. In any case, thanks for recalling Sipapu. best-
